NEW YORK, Sept. 29.

THE SITUATION IN WALL STREET.

The financial skies are beginning somewhat, but are yet far from clear. [illegible] The Gold Exchange Bank appears in a darker situation than yesterday, and the general opinion is that it cannot survive. [illegible] As Lockwood & Co. failed to-day, the bank is less likely to get its money, and is probably unable to pay what it owes to the Gold Room. [illegible] Its affairs have been put into the hands of a receiver. [illegible] Very little is known about failures, and nearly all depends upon Smith, Gould & Martin. If they make no settlement with the Gold Board there will be many failures, and if they consent to an amicable adjustment there will be comparatively few houses to go down. The only failures officially announced thus far are Lockwood & Co., Julius & Co., Chas. A. Meigs & Son, and Fuller, Trent & Co. [illegible]

COMFORT AND HEALTH.

In having a house warm and free from dampness. A few moments' investigation at once convinces any one that he cannot afford to build without it.

What is It?

It is a very hard, compact and solid paper or pasteboard, about the thickness and stiffness of a book cover, and is one of the best known non-conductors, and for that reason is just what is demanded to keep out cold winds and to prevent the heat generated within the house from passing out. The entire outside of the house is covered with it before the clapboards are put on, thus making it almost AIR TIGHT. For this purpose we saturate it with tar, so that it keeps out dampness, and the tar also has the effect of keeping away all rats, mice and other vermin.

It is also extensively used

Instead of Plastering,

And makes the house warmer than a coat of plastering and at MUCH LESS expense.

The cost is trifling, the advantage of using it undoubted and the results entirely satisfactory. No one should build without informing themselves of its various advantages and cost. We have issued a small pamphlet containing full directions how to use it, cost per square yard, &c., and send it, with samples of the Paper, to any address, free. Send for a circular if you intend to build, or you will regret it after the house is done and you see its utility on your neighbor's house, for he certainly will use it, and if he does his neighbors who build after him will do likewise. THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

The nominees [illegible] for the Constitutional Convention are as follows:

Fifty-ninth District—S. S. Hayes, Joseph Medill, John C. Haines.
Sixtieth District—Charles Hitchcock, W. F. Coolbaugh.
Sixty-first District—Elliott Anthony, Daniel Cameron.

In presenting these names it is evident that the Citizens' Committee endeavored to secure sound lawyers, practical business men, and men of such well-known character and reputation as to command the confidence of the entire community. Mr. Hayes was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1846, and was confessedly one of the leading members of that body. He is a lawyer by profession, and has a reputation co-extensive with the State. He is probably more identified with the local interests of the West Division of the city than any other man in it. He is one of the ablest public speakers in the State, and would decidedly add to the weight and influence of any delegation that Chicago could send to the convention. He is a Democrat in politics, and has thus been in the minority during the greater part of the last ten years. He [illegible] held the office of City Comptroller in the years 1862-4, the duties of which position he discharged to the entire satisfaction of the public. Shortly after his retirement from this office he was appointed a member of the United States Revenue Commission, in conjunction with David A. Wells and Stephen Colwell. His labors in the commission were marked by his usual industry and [illegible], and were eminently creditable to himself and useful to the section which he represented. The fact that Mr. Hayes is a Democrat ought not, upon an enlarged view of the subject, to be considered a disqualification. We have had too many Legislatures and other public bodies overwhelmingly Republican. A party is never so safe as when it has an active and vigilant minority to keep it in the straight and narrow path. If elected, Mr. Hayes will go to the convention pledged to oppose and discountenance the introduction into the constitution of any private or partisan measures whatsoever.

As the name of Mr. Medill is on both tickets, and as he will, probably, receive the unanimous vote of his district, it is scarcely necessary to allude particularly to him. So emphatic an expression of the confidence of the public is seldom accorded to any person in political life.

Hon. John C. Haines is the other nominee [illegible]. Mr. Haines [illegible] elected Mayor of the city during periods of great political excitement, and in those two contests he developed not only remarkable popularity but unusual sagacity and power. His administration was signalized by economy, integrity, and common sense, and, when he retired from office, he left the Republican party stronger than he found it. Since then he has absented himself from active politics, but has always been a [illegible] Republican. He organized the State Savings Institution after his retirement from the Mayoralty, and was its first President. He resigned that position, a few years ago, to accept the Presidency of the Garden City Insurance Company. Mr. Haines is one of the sterling business men of Chicago, one of the foremost in good works, practical, judicious, public-spirited, and far-seeing. His election to the Constitutional Convention will be an important addition to the practical working force of that body.

In the Sixtieth District, Charles Hitchcock and W. F. Coolbaugh are the nominees. Mr. Hitchcock is one of the very ablest lawyers in the State. It is not too much to say that no man stands higher at the bar than he. Mr. Hitchcock has never been prominent in political life, but has always been a Republican. In the Constitutional Convention, or in any other body requiring the exercise of sound discretion and a thorough knowledge of the law, he would at once take a leading position. It will be found, as the campaign proceeds, and the merits of candidates are canvassed, that Mr. Hitchcock will rise in the public estimation every day. Hence, we commend those who have styled him a "nondescript" to talk and write about him as much as possible. They may succeed in electing him by a unanimous vote. Mr. Hitchcock is a resident of Hyde Park.

Mr. Coolbaugh is the President of the Union National Bank, and, we need not add, one of the foremost business men in the Northwest. Though not active in politics since he has resided in this city, he was for some years a member of the Iowa State Senate, and once received the votes of his political friends in the Legislature of that State for United States Senator. He is so well known and so [illegible] respected that any commentary upon him is almost superfluous. Mr. Coolbaugh is a Democrat in politics, but was an ardent and vigorous supporter of the war for the Union.

Elliott Anthony, Esq., and Colonel Daniel Cameron are the nominees in the Sixty-first District. Mr. Anthony is one of the ablest and most successful lawyers in Chicago, and scarcely anybody has been more prominent on the Republican side of our politics than himself. He has been the legal adviser of the County Board of Supervisors for several years, acting without compensation, and always to the advantage and benefit of the public. He has filled several important public positions to the satisfaction of his constituents. He is one of the most effective public speakers in the city.

Colonel Cameron is a resident of the town of [illegible], and has lived in Cook County more than twenty years. He is, we believe, [illegible] Illinois Infantry, otherwise called the "Scotch Regiment," during the war, serving first under General Burnside, in East Tennessee, and afterward under General Sherman in the Georgia campaign. Colonel Cameron is a Democrat in politics, but was never tainted with "Copperheadism" in the slightest degree, as his gallant service in the army attests. He is a man of clear intellect and quick perception, and will make an excellent member of the Constitutional Convention.

None of the gentlemen nominated on the Citizens' ticket had sought these places beforehand. They were selected for their known and recognized fitness for the work to be done.

The platform upon which these nominees stand, and to which they all give their support, [illegible] was disfigured with legislation intended to benefit one political party and to aggrandize individual politicians. Thus the whole expense of the convention was lost to the people, and the necessary reforms in our fundamental law delayed nearly ten years. To repeat such folly at this time would be unwarrantable trifling with the highest public interests. The new constitution is to be made for all the people, and not for one political party, or one set of men. So important was it deemed to secure the services and influence of leading men in both political parties to the recent Constitutional Convention in New York, that the Republican Legislature provided for the election of a given number of members by the State at large, in a general ticket,—one-half of the names to be selected by the Republicans and the other half by the Democrats. It was very much to the credit of the New York Convention that no partisan measures were introduced or considered by it. We hope that the Illinois Convention will be equally wise. Depend upon it, no good can come of any gerrymandering apportionments, or other partisan schemes, in the new constitution.

THE WATER STREET HOMICIDE.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury in the Water street case, to the effect that Jackson had "strong provocation, not amounting, however, to justification," for shooting Sullivan, and remanding Jackson to the authorities, is probably the first step in a gradual process which will end in letting the prisoner escape wholly unpunished. The drama opens with Sullivan, in a brawling condition, anxious to fight anybody, and apparently ready to "run a muck" and kill whoever crossed his path. He was so crazed by the spirituous liquors he had drunk as to be almost, probably entirely, unconscious of what he did. If any other cause than liquor had brought him to this condition,—if it were the result of the bite of a rabid dog, or of disease of the brain caused by any [illegible] as insane, and, therefore, not morally responsible. He is in the "saloon" of Jackson, a liquor-seller, and [illegible] a graduate of the Penitentiary. Whether Jackson had sold him the liquor which threw him into this mad frenzy, was not inquired into by the Coroner, but is really the salient point in the case. It is one thing for a quiet, orderly merchant to have a vagabond enter his store, inflamed with bad rum, and go to flourishing a hatchet over the heads of his customers, and of the merchant, with threats to kill them all before sundown. It might be certain death to attempt any less violence upon such an intruder than to shoot him. There might be no time to call the police, and not even time to think coolly what should be done.

But if the deceased Sullivan entered Jackson's premises in his right mind, or nearly so, and was there crazed by drink which Jackson sold him, the case is greatly altered. Neither law nor justice will justify the proprietor of a drinking den in first making a customer crazy, and then shooting him because he is crazy. Sullivan, at the time he was killed, was, doubtless, in a blustering and quarrelsome, perhaps in a savage and murderous, condition. But if Jackson had sold him the liquor that made him so, let him have the same punishment as if he had shot Sullivan in cold blood, when he asked civilly for his drink [illegible]. We do not pretend that the responsibility for drunkenness can be shifted from the man who drinks to the man who sells. Sullivan was responsible for his drunkenness, and has been fatally punished for it. He is beyond the reach of human tribunals. But this may be one of those cases where the seller also can be held to his responsibility. If a man prefers to earn his living by selling insanity to his customers, he does not stand in the position to shoot them because they are not sober and respectful. He deals with burning brands in a powder magazine, and he must handle them cautiously. Joliet Penitentiary is a better place at all times for both Jackson and Sullivan than Jackson's saloon. They can learn more honest work, and do society more and better service, with more real comfort to themselves, in Joliet Prison, than they can in the slums toward which they gravitate. It is no more a hardship to send men of their class to Joliet, apart from their guilt or innocence, than to send young men to college to be educated. We hope this habit of releasing our stabbers, shooters and temporarily frenzied murderers will be stopped. Let any and every man who has taken life under doubtful circumstances spend five or ten years at Joliet, ten hours a day at wagon-making, stone-cutting, or other useful and profitable trades, with substantial food, no liquor, and compulsory good behavior, would be good treatment for a great many more men than get it. We wish every criminal jury in the State, before sitting down to hear a case, and before allowing their brains to be befogged by quibbles of fact and of law, would visit Joliet, look over the Penitentiary, consider the effect of the orderly, sober, and industrious habits there inculcated, and then, in weighing the evidence, ask themselves, not only whether there is reasonable doubt of the guilt of the prisoner, but also, whether, on general principles, the Penitentiary at Joliet would not be a good place to send him. If this consideration were weighed every time, fewer assassins would get off on problematical doubts as to whether the deceased would not have killed them if they had not promptly prevented it by his murder.

NOTARIES PUBLIC.

The case of a Notary Public acting officially after the expiration of his term of office has just been the subject of an Executive decision at Springfield. It appears that Governor Matteson, in 1853, appointed a Notary Public, the commission to run for four years. This commission expired in 1857. The Notary never applied for reappointment, but continued to perform the duties of his office up to the time of his death, in 1860. Recently, a deed acknowledged before him in 1859 was presented to the Secretary of State for a certificate as to the notarial character of the officer, and the Secretary of State and Governor Palmer have refused it.

There can be no question as to the correctness of the decision. Nevertheless, the injury to the persons interested in the deed is a serious one. It was acknowledged before this supposed Notary in good faith, and without question as to his authority. Ten years have elapsed; and from the fact that at this late day an application is made to complete the official character of the acknowledgment, it would seem that the title to the property in question is already under a cloud growing out of this transaction. The question naturally arises, Are there other Notaries in the State acting officially without a commission? Once a Notary, [illegible] may be, and is often, we are afraid, always a Notary in practice; but the official acts of all such persons are void, and they are committing heartless frauds upon the public by doing business after their terms have expired. It has been but a few years since we were personally cognizant of the case of a man, holding an appointment as Notary Public for Livingston County, moving to Chicago, who while here took acknowledgments and performed all kinds of notarial business,—dating the papers, however, at Pontiac. Notaries are always appointed for a specific term of years. After the expiration of that term they have no more authority to act than they had before they were appointed. There should be a general overhauling of the list of Notaries in the several counties, some of whom, perhaps, have been acting so long that they have forgotten the necessity of having their commissions renewed. Notaries, hereafter, will do well to have their commissions framed, so that customers can have the chance of knowing that they are doing business before a [illegible].

THE MEN WHO SIT ON JURIES.

The jury in the case of the engineer Griffin, recently tried in Pennsylvania for manslaughter, in causing the Mast Hope disaster, after a short absence, rendered a verdict of acquittal. The next day the jurors were called before the Court, and Judge Bennett thus addressed them:

"Gentlemen: [illegible] great wrong which you have inflicted on the community.

"In future, I hope you will feel a proper regard for your oaths. You are now discharged from any further duty in this court. You are not fit to act as jurymen. I will not try causes before such a jury."

We commend the fearlessness of Judge Bennett to the judiciary generally. In large cities it is almost impossible to get juries fit to try cases involving the protection of human life. Jury duty is an obligation upon all citizens, and which a man has no more right to shirk than he has to pay taxes. It is a hardship upon business men, but one which they must bear. To excuse men from jury duty because they have something else to do, is to hand over the administration of justice to the last class which ought ever be called upon for such a purpose. The remedy is partly in the hands of the courts. It is their duty to compel the attendance of competent and responsible persons for jury duty, and it is in their power to discharge all persons who may be summoned for that purpose, who are unfit to be trusted with one of the most important branches of government—the execution of the laws. The example set by the Recorder's Court, of this city on Monday last, and by the Court in Pennsylvania, might be followed by other courts with great profit to the cause of justice. Why should a Court be a party to the farce of trying criminals before juries selected to acquit, or men so disqualified by habits, associations, or want of education and intelligence, as to be unable to form a reasonable judgment upon either the law or the facts? The rebuke by the Pennsylvania Judge was merited, and it was timely. There had been a most wanton sacrifice of human life; the criminality was brought home to the accused; but a jury of his friends refused to convict him. The uniform failure to convict persons notoriously guilty of the most serious crimes, especially of the destruction of human life, is the greatest possible encouragement that can be given to the murderers, assassins, and burglars who [illegible] the knife, the pistol, and the bludgeon.

FREE EVENING SCHOOLS.

One of the most tangible evidences of modern progress is presented in the increased attention which has been paid during the past few years to the instruction of those who are prevented from attending the day school. Under our free educational system there are few native American citizens who cannot secure a fair common school instruction in that part of life antecedent to the years necessarily devoted to "making a living;" but there are great numbers among us, who have emigrated hither from the Old World where these advantages are comparatively few and expensive. There are hundreds of thousands of adults in every country of Europe who have never learned to read in their native tongue, much less to write and cypher. Many of them find their way hither, where their ignorance places them in a much more disadvantageous position than they occupied at home.

The foreign born element is especially numerous in Chicago, and, hence, a large proportion of our adult population is in need of the assistance which can be given only in the evening school, as the day is necessarily occupied in toil.

So long ago as the autumn of 1856, an effort was made by our city authorities to reach this class, and an evening school was opened in the West Market Hall, on Randolph street, near Desplaines, under the care of D. S. Wentworth, now the Principal of the Cook County Normal School. The term opened with sixty pupils, but the number was soon increased to 150. A great deal of interest was manifested, but the course was allowed to die out for lack of pecuniary support.

Another effort was made in the fall of 1862, by the Board of Education of this city, and an appropriation secured from the municipal treasury, which has been repeated each succeeding year. The first winter about 483 adults availed themselves of the offered instruction.

For the coming winter more extensive preparations have been made, commensurate with the increase in the population. Last week evening sessions were commenced in the Dearborn, Jones, Franklin, Hayes, Washington, and Foster Schools, under the charge of the Principals of each of those buildings, who are assisted by a corps of competent teachers; they give instruction in reading, writing, arithmetic, and grammar. An evening High School has also been established in the Dearborn building, on Madison street, near Dearborn, under the charge of Messrs. Peabody and Payne, of the High School, in which a more extended course is taught, including natural philosophy, mechanical drawing, algebra, geometry, and bookkeeping. The design of this latter feature is set forth in the following extract from the report of the Committee on Evening Schools, published in the last annual report of the Board of Education:

"[illegible]"

Superintendent Pickard also says:

"The purpose of the committee to establish an evening High School cannot be too warmly commended. There are many intelligent young mechanics who would gladly pursue their studies farther than through the elements of a common school education. [illegible] In improved machinery, and in the more productive labor of those educated at her expense, the city will realize a profit from her expenditure."

We need only add to this that the expense of conducting the evening sessions will be the same, whether the attendance be large or small. Every citizen, therefore, who is acquainted with one to whom such instruction would be beneficial, will do a service to society by calling his or her attention to the subject, and that without increasing the cost to the tax-paying community. We believe that, if the existence of these free educational facilities were generally known, the school houses would be crowded by young people of both sexes, for there are few whose ignorance is so profound that they do not comprehend the immense advantages which such education confers in the race of life.

Charles Dickens, in his speech at the Birmingham Midland Institute, succeeded in expressing his political faith in a manner quite as obscure as the celebrated response of the Pagan priestess, "Romanos Carthagos vincere," which might mean that Rome would conquer Carthage or that Carthage would subdue Rome. He says that "his faith in the people governing is infinitesimal; his faith in the people governed is illimitable." By the "people governing" he may mean the present governing class, or the political principle that the people ought to govern. If he means to declare that his faith in the present governing class in England is infinitesimal, he is democratic. If he means to say that his faith in the principle that the people should govern is infinitesimal, he is aristocratic. So of the second article of his faith. The phrase, "the people governed," may mean the present disfranchised, or governed class, or it may mean the state and condition in which the people now are, by reason of being governed as they are. If Mr. Dickens has an illimitable faith in the "people governed," in the sense of the disfranchised, or governed class, then he is for universal manhood suffrage and reform. If his illimitable faith in "the people governed" is like the confidence he would place in a "lion chained," if it is a faith in the state and condition in which the people now are by reason of being governed as they are, then Mr. Dickens would be a much more conservative aristocrat than we conceive him. Mr. Dickens undoubtedly means that he has boundless faith in the resources of the people for self-government, and no faith in the wisdom of an exclusively governing class. In attempting to frame an antithetic expression which would give force to this sentiment, he has uttered that which on its face would as easily convict him of being a high tory as an ultra democrat.

The discussion on Free Trade, last evening, at Library Hall, between Messrs. Blanchard and Stebbins, attracted a large audience, who listened with deep interest to the debate. Mr. Blanchard set forth with great force [illegible] the general principles of [illegible] freedom in trade, illustrating his arguments with many telling instances of the evils [illegible]. Mr. Stebbins is familiar with his subject, and did, probably, as well as could be done with a cause so essentially weak. A report of the debate will be found in other columns. It will be continued this evening, when, no doubt, a still larger audience will be attracted by the awakened interest in the subject, and the ability of the debaters.

The candidates on the Citizens' ticket met yesterday and organized a Campaign Committee, whose names will be found in another column. The committee will meet at their rooms, No. 156 Washington street, every day, until the election (Sundays excepted) and will, in a short time, commence a thorough canvass of the city and county. The encouragement they have received leads them to expect the most decisive victory for local and municipal reform that has ever been achieved in the United States.

ILLINOIS.

Lyman Baker, of Whiteside County, lost, the other day, [illegible] fat cattle, which broke into a field and killed themselves eating corn.

Mrs. Wray, of Albany, Whiteside County, received several anonymous letters saying that her house would be burned some night, and that there was another woman in the neighborhood, with a long tongue, whose house would also be destroyed. Mrs. Wray remained away from home one night, and on returning next morning, found her house burned to the ground. [illegible]

The Jackson County Journal of the 24th says: "A few days ago, we referred to the probable failure of the coal shaft enterprise. The vein that was reached proved too thin to be valuable. The workmen are now engaged in 'drifting'—that is, in following up the vein to see if it is thicker elsewhere. [illegible] The probability is that the shaft will be sunk no further, and the whole work will be abandoned."

MISCELLANEOUS.

Within the last three years seven persons have been killed in going into menagerie cages and facing lions and tigers.

A Canadian paper states that a young man bathing somewhere in the Province of Quebec, deposited his clothes upon what he supposed to be a stone. It proved to be a somnolent seal, however, which woke up suddenly, and waddled out seaward with the ingenuous youth's dry goods on its back.

A carpenter, named [illegible], and his wife and two children, were found dead in [illegible] on the floor of the room in which the bodies were found, and there was little doubt that the charcoal was lighted by [illegible] and his wife with the deliberate design of destroying their own lives and the lives of their children.

A company has been formed in Paris to carry out a really novel idea in the way of advertising. The company takes a lease of one window in the second or third story of a house in a prominent street or boulevard. From dusk till after midnight a transparency, brightly lit up, on a sea-green ground, sets forth the advertisement. You can arrange either for a display once a week or a whole week, &c., alternately in any of the windows in the several quarters possessed by the company.

Some scamps at New York make their living by watching the advertisements of "missing" persons. They go to the relatives or friends of the missing party and profess to have knowledge of the whereabouts of the persons advertised. They are generally stated to be a good distance off, and the travelling expenses will be large, and when the relatives hand over the necessary funds these self-appointed detectives are among the missing themselves. This is a new method of "raising the wind," and the persons who practise it inflict untold tortures upon the persons whom they so cruelly deceive.

The London Times has an article on what it calls the "great and fascinating idea, were it only practicable, involved in the suggestion of a Federal Council of all English communities, armed with a Federal army and a Federal navy, and charged with the single duty of preserving the self-governed States of the Union, in a strict offensive and defensive alliance." The Times thinks that "the very situation in which our colonial relations now stand precludes the possibility of contemplating this as feasible."

Professor Faber's speaking machine is to be exhibited at Hamburg during the International Horticultural Exhibition. It is said to articulate various words, and even to answer questions by simple sentences, with wonderful distinctness. This is not the first invention of the kind that has been exhibited. Wolfgang von Kempelen, the inventor of a chess automaton, who was born at Presburg, in 1734, and died at Vienna in 1804, constructed a machine of the kind, and wrote on the subject. The machine about to be exhibited at Hamburg is, however, reputed to be more perfect than any previous invention of the kind.

An old man, whose sight was defective and had to use glasses, was reading a newspaper on the train between Wheeling, Va., and Washington, a few days ago. When the cars reached the first tunnel the quick disappearance of the light caused him to look up. Taking off his spectacles and wiping them, he replaced them and again tried to read. Perceiving that all was still dark, he dropped both paper and spectacles, exclaiming, in a loud voice, "My God, I'm blind, I'm blind!" This aroused the passengers, and it was a long time before he could be convinced what was the matter. On coming again to the light he thanked God fervently for his sight.

Mrs. McKay, of No. 326 East Twenty-second street, New York, who had advertised for a position as wet nurse, was visited on Tuesday of last week by a well-dressed lady of considerable attractions, and wearing a profusion of valuable jewelry, who represented that she was in want of a good wet-nurse, for her husband did not wish her to suckle her babe, which was about four months old. An agreement was made that the lady should pay [illegible] per week for the charge of her infant, which was left with Mrs. McKay, and a deposit of $4 paid. The lady, giving her name as Mrs. Akely, then left, promising to return the next day, and pay the balance of the first month's nursing. As she did not make her appearance, Mrs. McKay, becoming alarmed, sent her husband to the address given, and found it to be a false one.

On the occasion of the prorogation of Parliament, he ran with the copies of the Queen's speech from Westminster to the chief telegraph office in Moorgate street in fourteen and a half minutes—a very fast performance, considering the crowded state of the streets during the middle of the day."

CITY POLITICS.

Meeting of Representative Irishmen Last Evening.

They Determine to Stand by the Citizens' Ticket.

The meeting called by "Frank Agnew" and "J. L. Quirk," at No. 180 Washington street, was attended last evening by the representative Irishmen of the city.

At 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order, and "Frank Agnew" was put in the chair.

Mr. J. J. Kearney was nominated for Secretary.

Mr. Kearney said he was invited to attend a meeting of Irishmen and he always felt it his duty to respond to such a call. He did not know the object of the meeting, and wished it to be understood that in accepting the position he did not commit himself to any action of the meeting.

Colonel Wm. B. Snowhook was not exactly in favor of the Citizens' ticket, as the particular men he wanted were not candidates upon it.

Supervisor McDermott denounced the "ring" as a [illegible] crowd of [illegible].

Mr. Peter Caldwell fumed and fretted for a separate Democratic ticket. The proposition was received with evidences of disapprobation.

Alderman Walsh was opposed to the manner in which the people's ticket was nominated [illegible] was an improvement upon the "ring." [illegible] make fools of [illegible] and the Irish people should [illegible] themselves by going back upon a party organ [illegible] in favor of reform, and against the corruption that made our city a by-word for the world.

Alderman McRoy advised them to be careful and cautious. They might go farther and speed worse. If they had the interests of the people at heart, and did not want to be led by the nose by the "ring" or by hirelings of the "ring," they had better make up their minds to support the Citizens' ticket with all the means in their power.

Mr. A. L. Morrison spoke at great length, and forcibly in favor of retrenchment and reform. They should trample in the dust the men who disgraced the party they belonged to, and throw off the yoke of an infamous and corrupt "ring." He was a Republican, and that was one of the reasons why he wanted to have the good name of the party he belonged to, and was proud of, cleansed from the foul taint of corruption. If a few men proved recreant to the trust imposed in them by the people, they should be expelled from the party, and he was glad to see that there were men in the party ready and willing to sink partisanship and political feeling to promote the common weal, and to eject from power men unfit and unworthy to hold any office. It was not a question of party, but of the people. It was justice and right against fraud and tyranny, and any man, whether he were American or Irishman, who voted in favor of iniquity and corruption, deserved the penalties which his action would be sure to entail upon himself and his children, and upon this republic. The gentleman was frequently applauded.

A gentleman, whose name was not given, stated that, on Saturday last, he heard General Salomon say that he would give $20,000 out of his private pocket to pay the expenses of running a separate Democratic ticket, or, if that could not be done, of getting up an independent Irish ticket.

Alderman Mark Sheridan, of the Fifth Ward, defended the mode of selecting the Citizens' [illegible] names upon it, that was the fault of Irishmen who did not put in their claims, and not of the nominating committee, which stood ready to do ample justice to the Irish people in the city. (Loud applause.) The places assigned to Irishmen on the ticket were respectable and responsible. (Applause.)

Mr. Patrick Sullivan said he was a workingman who worked hard to support his family, and he did not want to be robbed to supply office-holders with [illegible]. A few Jackson Democrats talked of nominating an independent ticket; why, they might as well talk of nominating an independent moon. Let them support the Citizens' ticket, and keep their men into public places. (Loud and prolonged applause.)

Mr. Graham began to speak in favor of the "Ring."

Alderman Sheridan wished to inquire if he was not a member of the "Ring" Campaign Committee.

Mr. Graham, who was accompanied by Mr. Feeny, "ring" candidate for Justice, or Injustice, of the Peace, acknowledged that he was on the committee, and immediately subsided.

Several other speeches, all in favor of the Citizens' ticket, were made.

The proceedings were unanimous throughout, and no ill feeling was displayed. Nine-tenths of the meeting, which numbered about one hundred gentlemen, were in favor of the Citizens' ticket. In fact, but three, Mr. Snowhook, a gentleman as yet unknown to fame, Mr. Feeny, one of the "ring" candidates, and Mr. Graham, one of the "Ring" Campaign Committee, were absolutely and openly in favor of the "ring." The meeting adjourned without any decided action, and the object of "Frank Agnew" and "J. L. Quirk," who presumed to call it, was ignominiously defeated. The feeling was that the Citizens' ticket should be supported by the voice, and be sustained by the vote of every true and honest Irishman in the city, who did not wish to allow himself and his honor to be sold by one or two presumptuous soreheads, who designate themselves by the title of leaders, when they are merely bogus hirelings in the service and pay of the "ring."

THE ABEND-ZEITUNG.

A Card from Messrs. Vocke, Gross, and Others.

To the Editor of The Chicago Tribune:

We have waited patiently for the last two days to see the utmost that could be urged against us, and now feel it incumbent upon ourselves to answer the charges which have been so lavishly made at our expense.

In the first place, our intention has never been in the slightest degree to abate the opposition to the "Barnacle Ring," or to interfere with the political action of the Abend-Zeitung. We have never been approached by any of the emissaries of the Court House clique, nor have we been in any way inclined to treat with it. We are personally, as well as politically, opposed to compromise or surrender.

Secondly. Our action in the premises was due to the persistent defiance with which our interests in the Abend-Zeitung had been met. The stockholders were at no time allowed to examine the books of the concern, nor were they ever satisfied with regard to its financial standing by the so-called business manager. Coupled with this, we were abundantly convinced that the interests of the Reform movement were not as ably or as warmly sustained by the existing editorial management as they could have been. Far from being desirous to modify the persistent attack and assault on the organ of the "Ring," we were only anxious to make it more dignified, more authoritative, more emphatic, and more sincere. No dishonest or unscrupulous intention governed us in what we did, and such charges as have been made against us owed their existence to the malice of our enemies. We attempted merely to assert ourselves as proprietors and directors in the face of the knavish opposition of a fraudulently elected board, and at no time, individually or collectively, contemplated anything calculated to injure the interests of the paper or the popular movement. Had our proceedings not taken place about the time of an excited municipal election, such charges could never have managed to exist.

Thirdly. Although our position was fortified by the opinions of Judge Beckwith and Messrs. Tuley and Adams, we offered Lieb and Jensch full liberty to continue the management of the paper in statu quo until the case should be adjudicated upon, which offer they scornfully refused and challenged us to carry out our reforms.

Fourthly. Mr. Ira Buell was at no time retained by ourselves, and at no time acted in our behalf. Thus one of the most serious items of evidence against us is disposed of.

Finally, our intentions were sincerely for the good of the paper and for the popular cause. Our action was [illegible] the majority of the stockholders to the Abend-Zeitung fully comprehend and endorse it. Lieb has availed himself of the opportunity to throw the public off the scent and make capital out of a spurious and insincere cry of "Ring Persecution."

The "Ring" has had nothing to do with it, and would have had nothing to do with the paper under our control. We are yet satisfied that the courts will sustain our action, and should such be the result, we are pledged to an active, untiring and genuine opposition to the Barnacle Ring. All fair-minded men who know us personally need no evidence to convince them of the monstrous absurdity of ranking us with the corruptionists.
